

The diagram consists of a central horizontal line. Above this line, there are two long horizontal segments: one on the left and one on the right. Below the central line, there are several short horizontal segments of varying lengths. Some of these segments are aligned with vertical tick marks on the central line. Specifically, there are tick marks at approximately one-quarter, one-half, three-quarters, and the far right end of the line. Short segments are placed below the line, some aligned with these tick marks and others not.